

The Chapels Royal of St Peter ad Vincula and St John the Evangelist HM Tower of London

Dear friends,

According to a recent article in The Guardian, sales of the Bible reached a record high in the UK in 2025, increasing by 134% since 2019. Purchasers appear to be mostly young people. This correlates with growth in church attendance in England and Wales in previous years. According to a report published in April 2025 by the Bible Society, the numbers attending church in England and Wales rose by 50% since 2018; only 4% of 18- to 24-year-olds said they attended church monthly in 2018, but in 2024 that number rose fourfold to 16% – the largest increase of any age demographic. Overall, according to that Bible Society report, churchgoing Christians now make up 12% of the population, up from 8% in 2018. In numerical terms, that's growth from 3.7m in 2018 to 5.8m in 2024 – an increase of 56%. These figures are quite striking and all the more noteworthy for being based on solid survey evidence. My own experience is statistically less significant as I constitute a single data point but, in recent months, I too have encountered young people asking questions about the Christian faith with a clear intention of taking things further. Perhaps the plainest example of this was a young woman who simply said, 'I have just started reading the Bible, but I don't know how to tackle it. Can you advise me?' I tend to agree with those religious and social commentators who detect a turning-away from the strident atheism so prevalent amongst some writers a few years ago. Those atheist gods have turned out to have feet of clay. Their mockery of faith seems no longer to resonate with young people who are, furthermore, looking for something more substantial than some vague New Age-inspired 'spirituality'. In Christianity they will find a revealed religion rooted in historical fact. Those till receipts for Bibles are also a solid fact, which must mean something. Time will tell exactly what it is that we are now witnessing but we may allow ourselves to rejoice in what certainly look like a turn towards Christianity.

May I remind you that, with effect from Sunday 1st February, we shall again suspend services in the Chapel of St Peter ad Vincula while the next stage of work takes place – this time, on the roof. Therefore, from 1st February until at least the middle of March, we shall revert to having just one service each Sunday, which will be a service of Said Holy Communion in the Chapel of St John the Evangelist in the White Tower at 9.30 am. Once the roof work is complete, we should be able to revert permanently to our usual pattern of services. By then, the Chapel of St Peter ad Vincula should also be fully accessible to those with mobility issues, on completion of the works by the West Door.

With all good wishes, Cortland.

The Offering of the King's Gifts

On Tuesday 6th January Canon Roger Hall participated in the ceremony of The Offering of the King's Gifts at the Chapel Royal of St James's Palace. In this ancient ceremony, whose origins go back to Norman times, gold, frankincense and myrrh are offered by the Monarch's representatives in commemoration of the gifts presented to Jesus by the Magi, as described in the Gospel of St Matthew. In the photos below you can see Roger standing in front of the richly decorated altar, the gold vessels of the Chapel at St James's, a close-up of the gifts (the frankincense and myrrh helpfully labelled!) and Roger with Bishop Sarah in her capacity as Dean of the Chapels Royal, with Kevin Kitchener, one of The Yeomen of the King's Body Guard and also a former Yeoman Warder at the Tower of London.

Poem of the week: Costly Gifts, by Paul Berchtold

Paul Berchtold is a contemporary American writer who publishes his poems and reflections on a site called 'Thank your stars'. There he invites people to contact him and says, 'I will reply ASARP (as soon as reasonably possible.)'. I like that. I infer from reading his site that he is a Roman Catholic layman with an ecumenical outlook. Otherwise, I have not been able to find out much about him as he seems to prefer to let his poems speak for themselves. He himself would probably not claim that these are works of great literature but there is a straightforward freshness and spontaneity about them which I find attractive. The title of this poem, 'Costly Gifts', puts me in mind of Dietrich Bonhoeffer's theology of 'costly discipleship'. It seems appropriate to this Epiphany season.

Costly Gifts

When wise men came to find the Child,
They brought with them costly treasure.
They gave gold, frankincense, and myrrh.
Presents for the new king's pleasure.

God is pleased when we bring to him,
Virtues that these gifts symbolize.
The gold of love, myrrh of sacrifice,
And incense as prayers before his eyes.

It's wise to give the gold of love,
Kindness in thought and word and deed,
It's often the little things that count,
A smile, a word, help one in need.

It's wise to give the incense, prayer,
Rising up as smoke sweet-smelling,
Not just prayer from our lips alone,
But deep from our heart, upwelling.

It's wise to give myrrh, sacrifice,
In everything to do our best,
To give with generosity,
In what we do we will be blest.

But be wiser. Unite with Christ,
He is the Gift. He is God's Son.
The best we give, it is nothing
Compared to Christ - what he has done.

Jesus gives us his boundless love,
He came to show us how to pray,
He gave his life in sacrifice.
He is the truth, the life, the way.

Prayers

Please continue to remember those on our sick list, some of whom are very ill, amongst whom we name: Ciara, Louise, Stanley, John, Rob, Kofi, Nick, John, Christopher and Brian.

RIP

We pray for all those who have died as the direct result of war or oppression, in Ukraine, Iran, Palestine and elsewhere.

Please continue to pray for peace in Ukraine and the countries of the Middle East:

God of peace and justice, we pray for the people of Ukraine and the Middle East today.

We pray for peace and the laying down of weapons.

We pray for all those who fear for tomorrow,
that your Spirit of comfort would draw near to them.

We pray for those with power over war or peace,
for wisdom, discernment, and compassion to guide their decisions.
Above all, we pray for all your precious children, at risk and in fear, that you would hold and protect them.

This we pray in the name of Jesus, the Prince of peace. Amen.

With best wishes to all, Cortland.
